From: The Library

At long last, the Child Abuse Bibliography! Over 150 copies have been distributed to DSW staff throughout the country, as well as to Health Department offices and university and teachers' college libraries.

We, the library staff, see this bibliography as a "way in" to the vast amount of material dealing with child abuse already held by libraries in New Zealand (selection criteria are fully outlined in the compiler's introduction).

PLEASE SEE THAT INTERESTED STAFF ARE ALERTED TO THE EXISTENCE OF THIS BIBLIOGRAPHY AND THAT THEY HAVE READY ACCESS TO IT ON A CONTINUING BASIS.

Requests for items in the bibliography can be made by either using the enclosed form or simply writing to us (always quote the bibliography item numbers please!) Due to the long-term reference resource aspect of the bibliography we do not expect lengthy lists -- à la the Current Awareness Bulletin -- to be returned to us within a fortnight ... nor will there be a limit on the number supplied to any one individual or office. We would, however, ask that initial requests in particular be limited insofar as possible, bearing in mind that material will always be available should you want it. For our part, we will attempt to process requests as quickly as library resources permit. As is the case with all library requests at any time, please do let us know if you have a date beyond which material will no longer be of use (it helps us establish our priorities).

Copies of the bibliography are, at this stage, very limited due to budgetary restrictions. Applications for additional copies can be made to the Librarian, DSW, and will be considered on an individual basis.

Introduction

Origins

The idea for a bibliography on child abuse originated with the Dept. of Social Welfare (DSW) some years ago. At a meeting of the National Advisory Committee on the Prevention of Child Abuse in June 1981 added stimulus was given by the interest shown and the need for such a work expressed by the Committee members to the DSW Librarian, Linda Clifford.

As a result of this meeting further discussions were held between Committee members and the DSW Librarian and this project was devised. At this stage discussions were held between the DSW Librarian and Megan Clark, Reference Librarian at the Dept. of Health (DH). The decision was made to run the project jointly between the two libraries, which vastly increased the scope of the bibliography.

Through the P.E.P. scheme, I was employed from December 1981 onwards to undertake the project, under the joint supervision of the Health and Social Welfare Dept. Librarians.

Aim

The main aim of this bibliography is to ensure that those interested in the topic can ascertain what material held in New Zealand is available through the DSW and DH Libraries. It is anticipated that DSW and DH staff will be especially interested in it as they deal with child abuse in a professional capacity. I hope that other organisations and individuals will also find access to material on the aspects of child abuse that they are interested in.

Précis for users

The bibliography contains only English language material held in N.Z. published between January 1974 and March 1982. Books and periodical articles are included.

All material is available through your own library. When placing requests it would be helpful to your librarian to mention that you found the item in this bibliography, and give the item number.

Scope

I have deliberately taken a broad view of child abuse - abuse of babies, children and adolescents, and aspects such as emotional abuse, 'yo-yo children', neglect, incest, child rape, sexual molestation inside and outside the family, children at risk, the counselling of abusive families as well as physical abuse have all been included. It is the job of the reader to select the aspects of child abuse relevant to his/her interests.

The time span of material included is January 1974 to March 1982. I have made exceptions for New Zealand books and periodicals since these are obviously of special interest and importance to the Departments concerned.

Only English language material is included. Letters in journals and articles from newspapers intended for general readership have been excluded. Most of the journals are medical and social work titles held either at DSW or DH libraries, or else they are obtainable through the interloan scheme from other N.Z. libraries.

I have checked the National Union Catalogue and the Finding List (Union List of Serials) at the National Library to ensure that as far as possible every item in the bibliography is available in New Zealand, and that the list of libraries holding each book is accurate and up-to-date.

Only annotated bibliographies published since 1978 are included. Any published before this date are likely to have included material written earlier than 1974, my cut-off point. Readers should bear in mind that bibliographies published overseas, even if the bibliography itself is held in New Zealand, may well refer to material which is not held in this country.

I have sighted books and journals held in the Social Welfare, Health and Justice Departments' Libraries. Through examining abstracts and indexes held at DSW and DH I was also able to include articles in journals held at other N.Z. Libraries which may be obtained through the Interloan service after a request has been placed with any library participating in the scheme. All such journals have been checked against the Finding List. The abstracts and indexes used were: Abstracts for Social Workers (1974-1977), Social Work Research and Abstracts (1977-1981), Abstracts on Criminology and Penology (1974-1979), Criminology and Penology Abstracts (1980-1981), British Humanities Index (1974-1981) and The New Zealand Index to Periodicals (1974-1981). Checking these abstracts has meant that articles and books are less likely to have been excluded because I did not know of their existence. It was a way of making sure that as much material as possible was discovered.

Incorporated in this bibliography are previous bibliographies compiled by the Health Dept. These were based on Index Medicus, so I have checked each reference using the Finding List and have only included articles which I believe are held in New Zealand Libraries.

DSW Library staff had previously attempted a literature search with SDI Search Services using the ORBIT system. The topic was legal reporting in child abuse. I have examined the print out and selected and included the fiche I felt would be of the most interest.

Index

The index is organised alphabetically according to the author's name and the title. I have incorporated editors and joint authors so that items can be identified readily in the bibliography even if only part of the reference is known. I have put the entry number, not the page number, in the index beside each reference.

Acknowledgements

I wish to thank the staff of the National Library, Justice, Health and Social Welfare Libraries. They answered my (many) queries and generally helped me find my way around library rules and the libraries themselves.

I do not wish to embarrass anybody, but I must mention the following people because of the special thanks they deserve. In particular, Megan Clark, DH Library, spent hours with me explaining both the basic and the finer points of the ISBD (International Standard Book Description) system. Without her patience and her explanations I could never have completed the job. As well, Linda Clifford, DSW Library, deserves grateful thanks for her support and guidance throughout my employment. Both were necessary and invaluable.

Sandra Morgan transformed this bibliography from 1011 handwritten cards into 57 pages of manuscript. This must have been a frustrating task since she had to struggle with my writing and also the ISBD notation but her perseverance and cheerfulness lasted until it was finished. I owe her many thanks and trust that she is as pleased with her typing as I am.

Both Megan and Linda are responsible for what is right with this bibliography. The responsibility for its errors rests with me. I appreciate the work of all these people and hope that they feel that the final result repays their efforts.

It is my hope that this bibliography will encourage those in the field to become more aware of the literature available and therefore better able to assist the victims of child abuse - children and parents.
